Whether they prohibit teaching in schools about trans people and related topics, mandate educators to disclose a child's sexual orientation and gender identity to their parents without the child's consent, or forbid trans youth from participating in school sports based on their gender identity, this kind of political hypervisibility without systems of support and protection make students vulnerable; and

- WHEREAS, According to the Massachusetts Commission on LGBTQ+ youth report in 2019, 40% of LGBTQ high school students across Massachusetts experienced discrimination of some form in their schools; and
- WHEREAS, This includes discrimination based on public displays of affection at school, using the locker room that aligns with a student's gender identity, using a chosen name or gender pronoun, and discussing LGBTQ issues in assignments; and
- WHEREAS According to the High School Youth Risk Behavior Survey in 2019 (YRBS), LGBTQ+ youth in Boston make up 15% of the Boston Public High School population; and
- WHEREAS, LGBTQ+ youth in Boston Public Schools, particularly queer BIPOC youth, face a disproportionate level of bullying and harassment based on their gender identity or sexual orientation; and
- WHEREAS, Responses to 2019 YRBS show that lesbian, gay, and bisexual high school students in Boston Public Schools reported a higher tendency than their heterosexual counterparts to engage in nearly all risk behavior related to social, emotional, and mental health categories, including feelings of hopelessness, suicide attempts, and being bullied; and

WHEREAS, In 2022, Boston Public Schools announced its student-centered Quality Guarantee through its 1.3 billion dollar budget that would invest in developing and implementing a quality guarantee framework, supporting accelerated academic outcomes for students, and offering resources to adopt the MassCore curriculum;
and

WHEREAS, Boston Public Schools' five-year Strategic Plan focuses on academic recovery for BPS students - with a particular focus on the social-emotional wellbeing and development of students most in need.
